The Weekend Theory

Weekends, done properly

McLeod Ganj

Little Lhasa, a monastery morning, and a starlit camp on Triund ridge.

DHARAMSHALA, HIMACHAL PRADESH

3 NIGHTS / 4 DAYS · DELHI TO DELHI

THE PLACE

A Tibetan town on an Indian ridge.

McLeod Ganj sits above Dharamshala in the Kangra district, a blend of Tibetan and British hill-station culture that earned it the name Little Lhasa. Monasteries, momos, mountain silence.

Above it all waits Triund, a 2,828 metre ridge at the foot of the Dhauladhar. The 9 km trail up is one of the friendliest treks in Himachal, which is exactly why the sunrise from the top feels like a secret you did not have to suffer for.

Day 0 The night the week ends

Day 1 Little Lhasa, on foot

Day 2 Nine kilometres to the stars

Day 3 Down the mountain, back through Dharamshala

Day 4 Home, sweet home

THE JOURNEY

Day by day, the way you will live it.

DAY 0

The night the week ends

Friday night, Delhi. You find your seat on the Volvo, the city lights thin out, and somewhere past midnight the road starts to climb.

Depart Delhi in an AC Volvo

Overnight drive into the hills

DAY 1

Little Lhasa, on foot

You reach McLeod Ganj as the town wakes. Check in, a slow lunch, and then the afternoon belongs to the streets: the roar of Bhagsunag Falls, prayer wheels at the monastery, the long browse down Mall Road.

The evening does not wind down. It turns up, a DJ night and dinner back at the hotel.

Arrive in the morning, check in and lunch

Bhagsunag Falls and Temple

Monastery and Mall Road

DJ night, dinner, overnight in the hotel

DAY 2

Nine kilometres to the stars

Early breakfast, check out, and the trail begins. Nine kilometres of oak and rhododendron, chai stalls at the right moments, the valley dropping away behind you.

By evening you are on the ridge at 2,828 metres. Dome camps, dinner, a bonfire, and a sky with no light pollution left in it.

Breakfast and hotel check-out

Trek to Triund, around 9 km

Reach the ridge by evening

Dome camps, dinner and overnight under the stars

DAY 3

Down the mountain, back through Dharamshala

Sunrise over the Dhauladhar, breakfast at the top, then the easy walk down. By afternoon you are back in McLeod Ganj, with one last stop: the cricket stadium at Dharamshala, the prettiest ground in the country.

Then the Volvo, and the mountains letting you go slowly.

Breakfast at the camps, trek down

Reach McLeod Ganj by afternoon

Dharamshala Cricket Stadium

Evening departure for Delhi

DAY 4

Home, sweet home

Delhi by morning. Photos full, legs sore, inbox unopened. The theory holds: a weekend is enough.

Arrive Delhi in the morning

“Somewhere between the bus ride and the summit, the week falls away.”
